

We Want Your Views

DARD's Equality Branch is consulting on the Department's first (draft) Children and Young People's Action Plan. The consultation runs until 22 January 2010 and we are keen to know what you think about it. You might have some ideas about how we could make it even better, or parts you think we should change and we would love to hear from you.

The Equality Branch team would like to come along and talk to your group about the Action Plan and to hear your views. We will listen to what you have to say, and will then make changes to our Plan before we publish it at the end of January 2010. Here's some of the questions we would like to talk about. Your group might have more to add to this list too.

What do you know about the work of this Department?

- Do you ever use any of its services?
- Which ones do you use?
- What do you think of the services that you use?
- Could they be made any better?
- Please tell us how.

What do you think about the actions in the Action Plan?

- Are they ok?
- Could we make them even better?
- If so, please tell us how we could do this.
- Are there other things that you think DARD should also consider doing for children and young people?
- Please tell us what you think.

What do you think about our draft Action Plan?

- Is it easy to read and understand?
- Is there more we could do to make it easier to understand?

Have you any views about any other DARD services that you would like to tell us about?

- Have you any suggestions about how we could make them even better for children and young people?

Please read our draft Children and Young People's Action Plan enclosed or on our website.
